

Rocks

Key words: balance, harmony, inner peace

The time has come to gather our inner world and order it to reach balance.

In the Grove, we can take the time to check each part of our being and make sure it has its counterpart. Everything we are is complete. If not, then we know what the purpose of our journey will be.

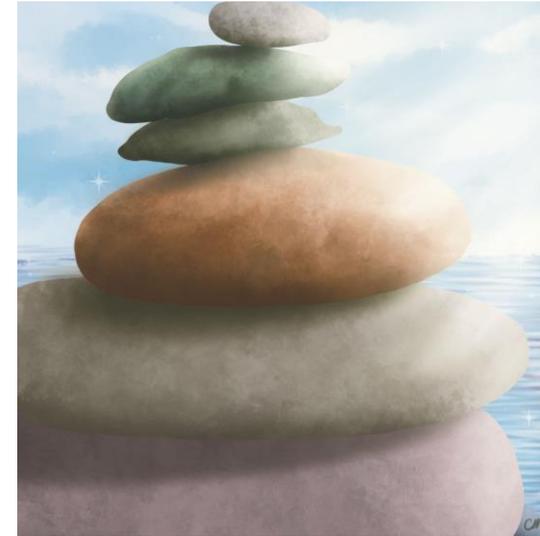

In order to find balance, we must first find acceptance. We have to acknowledge and welcome the one we become, and accept it with an open heart. Each of us is unique, in that each of our journeys, each of our stories is unique. And it made us the one we became by balancing each aspect of who we were with something that made it more efficient, more enlightening, more meaningful.

As we pile up each of our strengths and weaknesses, our dreams and our realities, our defaults and our qualities, our relationship with ourselves and with others, we relax and find peace.

We realize that we are more than we first thought. We are more because we are whole. And as such, we find balance. We know that our journey will add more rocks on our kern, and that it will be beautiful under either sun or moonlight.

We are confident because we know that whenever our balance is disrupted, another step will bring it back, and we will be able to place another rock on top of our pile.

Right now, we enjoy the stack of rocks we could make, and let it be warmed by the sun, knowing that it will also be touched by the stars and moon at night. It's a matter of balance.

The time has come to find balance within.

Without darkness, you can't see the light. We are complex beings, and as such, we need to realize that each part of us is in balance with another. They exist because they are part of a whole, they are part of you.

The time has come to accept yourself as this perfect imperfection, as this unique balance between weaknesses and strengths, between inner and outer exploration, between knowledge and ignorance. With acceptance, you will find balance.

The time has come to listen. Listen to your inner voice, let it tell you what needs balance in order to be whole. Listen to nature and anchor your soul in harmony with what surrounds you.

Time has come to reach peace within, to accept who you have become and to rejoice. You are unique, you only can balance what lives within. You alone can find peace and express it with the simplest action: stay balanced.